The most important part of a person's life is his childhood. The learning our young citizens receive at home, in school and in society between the ages of five and sixteen will shape them for the rest of their lives. during this phase, they need a good value based education to become enlightened human beings.

Parents and teachers need to have an integrated mission : education with a good value system at home and in school. Education is fundamental to building the nation of our dreams. All our aspirations as a society are tied to the capabilities of our youngsters, who form such a large part of our population.

A child's individuality and creativity need to be given due importance in our education. The curriculum needs to be innovative and the examination system overhauled so that it recognizes and evaluates creativity and new thinking rather than the memorization of facts. Schools must move away from being centres of education alone, instead becoming centres of knowledge and skill development.

Comprehension:

Read the following stanza and answer the questions that follow :

Shall I compare thee to a Summer's day
Thou art more lovely and more temperate:
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May'
And summer's lease hath all too short a date.
Sometimes too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd.

SubQuestion No : 143

Q.143 The poem is an example of:

- (1) Parampariterupaka (consequential metaphor) because here the superimposition, undermined by a resemblance, is the cause of another superimposition.
- (2) Nirangarupaka (entire metaphor) because here upameya is superimposed by upamana together with its subordinate parts.
- (3) Malarupaka (deficient metaphorserial) because here upameya is superimposed by serial of upamanas.
- (4) Mishritarupaka (mixed metaphor) because here the common attribute, the words implying comparison, upamana and upameya, all are expressed.

Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow :

Some sort of parallel may be found in the way logical connectives are usually unnecessary and often misleading, because too simple. Omitting an adjective one would need 'therefore' stressing the adjective 'although'; both logical connections are implied if the sentences are just put after another. In the same way, people are accustomed to judge automatically the forces that hold together a variety of ideas; they feel they know about the forces, if they have analysed the ideas; many forces, indeed, are covertly included within ideas; and so of the two elements, each of which defines the other, it is much easier to find words for the ideas than for the forces. Most of the ambiguities I have considered here seem to me beautiful; I consider, then, that I have shown by example, in showing the nature of the ambiguity, the nature of the forces which are adequate to hold it together. It would seem very artificial to do it the other way round, and very tedious to do it both ways at once. I wish only, then, to say here that such vaguely imagined 'forces' are essential to the totality of a poem and they cannot be discussed in terms of ambiguity, because they are complementary to it. But by discussing 'ambiguity', a great deal may be made clear about them. In particular, if there is contradiction, the greater the tension; in some way other than by the contradiction, the tension must be conveyed, and must be sustained.

Q146 What is the possibility in the analysis of a poem, if the forces are included in the ideas?

- (1) The ideas can be defined easily.
- (2) The forces can be defined easily.
- (3) Both the ideas and the forces can be defined easily.
- (4) It is difficult to define both the ideas and the forces.
