In performing its role in spreading information, media also plays a pivotal function in creating public opinion. Public opinion is an amalgamation of opinions, views, beliefs, and attitudes of individuals on a particular subject matter, voiced by a comparatively significant segment of the society. Human nature is such that it makes them eager to know about their surroundings, the tendency of being informed. Such nature makes them rely upon and getting influenced by the information that they receive without critically thinking about the authenticity of the information. Many times the information providers not only tell the bare information but also state their opinion along with it.
