Read the following passage carefully and answer of the questions that follows.

The government of Tamil Nadu announced on Monday (29th July) that "Hospital Day" will be observed every year on 30th July in honour of one of the country's prominent successful woman doctors in the early 20th century and the State's first woman legislator, Muthulakshmi Reddy on her birth anniversary. Muthulakshmi Reddy was born in 1886 in Madras. She was quite an intelligent student in school as she was an avid learner who had the ability to grasp things quickly. She applied for admission in Maharaja College in Pudukottai after she aced her matriculation exam but she was denied admission due to the conservative nature of the society. The college ignored her excellent academic performance and turned down her application. Only after the Raja of Pudukottai stepped in that college, was she granted admission in an all men's medical college, which was a huge deal.

She became the first Indian woman to graduate medical college and she also went on to become the first female legislator in British India. It's quite clear that Muthulakshmi broke all stereotypes and aimed for the stars at a time when women were not considered equal to men. She was a woman with a strong will and a golden heart who set out to write her own destiny. Not only did she break barriers but she also became an example for the generations of women who came after her. However, this was only the beginning for Muthulakshmi. After her graduation from her hometown, she took admission into Madras Medical College in 1907. It was during this time that she formed a deep friendship with Sarojini Naidu and Annie Besant, whose personal philosophies influenced Muthulakshmi's future endeavours. From winning the unique distinction of becoming the first woman medical graduate in India in 1912 to becoming the first woman House Surgeon in the Government Maternity and Ophthalmic Hospital, Madras, she conquered it all like a true boss lady. After pursuing her higher education in London, Muthulakshmi came back to India after she was requested by the Women's Indian Association (an organisation she helped establish in 1918) to enter the Madras Legislative Council in 1927. She was elected for the post of Vice-President, making her the first Indian woman member of a Legislative Council. After this, there was no looking back for Muthulakshmi.

This event also marked her entry into politics and legislation after which, she made efforts to improve the lives of all women everywhere. After her entry into politics, she helped in raising the minimum age for marriage for girls. She also pushed the Council to pass the Immoral Traffic Control Act because human trafficking was a major concern at that time. Muthulakshmi understood that even after the devadasi system was abolished the deeply-ingrained prejudices against women still existed. In 1930, three devadasi girls knocked at her door seeking shelter and that's when she realized that she needed to create a safe haven for countless young girls like them so she built Avvai Home. After witnessing the painful and untimely death of her sister due to cancer, Muthulakshmi was heartbroken so she decided to open up a specialized cancer hospital. In 1954, her dream of opening a Cancer Institute finally came true. It was the second specialized cancer centre in India and the first in South India at the time. In 1956, she was awarded the Padma Bhusan for her social work. She died on 22nd July 1968 at the age of 81.
